

Although I never could believe that a little cell phone could bring down a modern aircraft, I turned off my phone because it was the rule. I especially wondered how it is that the pay phones on the planes wouldn't produce the same risk. That being said, I respectfully request that the rule NOT allowing cell phone use while the plane is in flight be continued. All you have to do is remember a time when you were next to some loudmouth or someone who droned on and on. If you are on the ground you can just walk away. You can't do that in a plane. Allowing cell phones to be used while planes are in flight would essentially violate the little bit of private space we have as passengers. Please save us travelers! The test is: How much do you enjoy having to hear multiple conversations of the cell phone addicts the moment the plane touches down? Thanks for considering this comment.
